Fortnightly Nerds' Rewards III

Two airlines, "Airgo" and "Flyme", compete against each other on the route between Cleveland and Minneapolis. Each day they must decide on the number of discount seats to offer on this route. The number of seats offered by Airgo is S_A and the number offered by Flyme is S_F . The market-determined discount price, P , depends on the total number of seats offered by both airlines, $S_A + S_F$ according to the equation: $P = $200 - $0.10(S_A + S_F)$. The marginal cost of flying a passenger on this route equals $100 for Airgo and $50 for Flyme. Determine: (a) The profit function of each airline, (b) The best response function of each airline, and (c) The Nash Equilibrium. Please submit your answers to room 1652.
