MCV (Main Central Vertical) Practice Experiential Paper / Visual Model Components:

Practice the MCV at least three times (preferably daily).

Then write an experiential paper, which means there are only right answers (no "wrong" answers); it is about your personal experience as you practice the MCV and what you observe during and after the practice (each time you practice or as a whole experience). Please describe your experience in about 1-page, double-spaced, Arial font 12 (or similar sized font). Proper grammar and spelling are expected. Email to Tammra.Straub@rrcc.edu or to D2L tstraub@ucourses.com by October 18th.

You may opt to construct a visual model of what the MCV experience feels / looks like to you. Please submit this in Adobe .pdf format so it is easily opened. This may include a visual of a "before" and "after" feeling and other items as described below.

Some items you may want to include are:

How many times were you able to practice the MCV

What time of day you practiced it

What were your observations each time or as a result from the week of practice

What did you feel? ~ in your fingertips, in your body (where in your body?), in your mind, etc.

Did anyone practice the MCV along with you?

Describe any additional personal observations/comments about the MCV practice

Writing not your "thing"? The Learning Commons at the Lakewood and Arvada Campus have wonderful people to help you write anything (including this paper) and they can connect you to the in-house writing lab. Here is a link to the on-line writing center if you prefer to receive comments without verbally talking to someone at the Writing Center:

http://www.rrcc.edu/writing/

This is only to help you with writing your paper and is not the place to submit your paper for credit.

Email your paper / visual model to Tammra.Straub@rrcc.edu or tstraub@ucourses.com (attach to an email in D2L as Dropbox is not set up) by October 18th, late submissions will not be accepted.
