LANSDOWNE, VA – The Jack Kent Cooke Foundation has opened the nominations process for the largest scholarships available to students and recent alumni from community colleges. Through the initiative, called the Undergraduate Transfer Scholarship Program, the private foundation will award up to $30,000 annually per recipient to help students and recent alumni from community colleges and two-year institutions pursue four-year degrees at any accredited college or university in the United States. Last year, the Foundation received approximately 800 nominations for these awards.

While 45 percent of all college students in the US attend community colleges, few private funds are available to help top community college students transfer to four-year institutions, in spite of their high levels of ability and need. The Jack Kent Cooke Foundation scholarships can provide funding for tuition, room and board, required fees, and books for the length of the undergraduate degree, generally two years. Each award can total up to $30,000 annually, though the amounts will vary based on such factors as the cost of the institution each recipient attends and other aid received.

The Foundation plans to award approximately 60 scholarships through this program in spring 2013. It will renew awards each year based upon student performance. Current students are eligible, as are alumni who earned a degree from a community college or two-year institution since spring 2008 and have not since transferred to a four-year college. The application deadline is December 5, 2012. All candidates for the scholarship must be nominated by the faculty representative at their community college or two-year institution. The deadline for nominations is December 5, 2012. The list of faculty representatives and a link to the online application are available on the Foundation’s website, www.jkcf.org.
